Bees And Honey; Or, First Lessons In Beekeeping

Synopsis

This short treatise for beginners was originally written and published by Thomas Newman, then editor of the American Bee Journal, "the oldest bee-publication in America. Mr. Newman died in 1903. In this 1911 edition, C. P. DADANT updates the book with the newly discovered beekeeping skills which he had mastered. The Dadant family, originally from France, is one the first families of beekeeping in America. Charles Dadant (1817-1902) is considered one of the founding fathers of modern beekeeping. He was always seeking a better way to keep bees. Just as he had begun with the old European "eke", he quickly abandoned that kind of beekeeping for the modern Langstroth hive concept. This book published in 1911 has been reformatted for the Kindle and may contain an occasional defect from the original publication or from the reformatting.

Customer Reviews

Older book with quite a bit of apiary information. There are also a ton of interesting honey recipes in the back!

An older book but with some good solid information.

Exactly as described!
