Customer Reviews

I feel very different after reading "Open Her". I would even go so far as to say that I was forever changed! As a woman, I was surprised at how much I learned about myself in the pages of the book. I experienced a renewed reverence, celebration and awe for women and the feminine way. I felt validated, seen, released, and loved, as a warmth of recognition of my feminine aspects radiated from the pages. I recognized parts of me that had been trying to man-up to make up for men's lack of strength and clarity, and I felt myself putting the sword down, and desiring to encourage men on their self-journeys to provide a safe place for the feminine to thrive and give back. Through the author's beautiful presentation I experienced a level of worthiness and love for self and other that I had no idea was possible, as she neutralized the stereotypical divisions between the sexes, and made them, instead, beautiful and tangible invitations from one another for understanding and empowerment on the fragile playing field of intimacy. As I read on and on (I couldn't put the book down), there was the sense that this kind of profound union of giving and receiving was not only possible, but ours for the experiencing. I felt a genuine knowing flooding through me that I could ask without reservation for the time and the care of a man awake in the ways the author described in the archetypes; a man who loves and leads with his whole heart to reflect this in me, and that this asking would be supportive to the man's well-being and fullness of being all he is meant and wishes to be.

As a Neo-Tantra Massage practitioner and relationship coach, I have spent hundreds of hours helping my women clients understand their lives better through understanding Female Archetypes. I also always felt that there was not enough material on us men and our own Male Archetypes. It felt so amazing to read Karen's intimate insights into how she experienced the seven Male Archetypes in her own life. What is very helpful is how she shares just how the seven archetypes actually gifted her life and helped heal her "man-wounds". Masculine and Feminine energies and ways of relating to each other, have come increasingly under the spotlight, as all of us try to make sense of the new paradigm of Feminine caring energy sweeping the planet. How can we men relate with more understanding with the amazing women in our lives, so that they feel appreciated for their journeys and contribution to us? Karen's book has brought so much clarity to my work and also to my way of relating to the women who cross my path. As a highly creative man, I am very familiar with the apparent chaos in my energy before I get clarity about what I want to create and because I also embody four of the seven archetypes and I find myself flowing between the four with greater ease now. Karen's book shows yet again how the feminine desire is to bring the masculine to greater penetration of her and the world - through heartfelt love and full presence. She shows just how the feminine instinct and intuition (through sharing her own experiences), flows best when the woman senses and knows the male archetype in front of her. I have experienced a new level of worthiness as a man, because Karen has articulated just how amazing our gifts are as masculine men.
