The Troven (Kingdom Of Denall Book 1)

Synopsis

For centuries, young men in their eighteenth year have been sent away from the small village of Dungan for a year-long exile as they begin their journey into manhood. This traditional exile, the Troven, was instituted so that young men may find themselves, find their purpose, and find their place in the world. When Kaz Kinsley and his three friends leave to begin their Troven, all they have on their minds is getting to the first sign of civilization and finding a way to survive on their own. Fate has more in mind for these young men, though. Stone Seekers are on the move, sent by the evil sorcerer Mordyar to find six magical stones, each with the power to enhance one of six gifts every person in Denall is born with. When Kaz unknowingly comes into possession of the Sight Stone, he and his friends become part of the story of the Stones of Power, and their Troven suddenly becomes something much more.

Customer Reviews

I did not know what to expect with this book. The synopsis was intriguing to me, a traditional exile for young men in their eighteenth year, what? What I did not expect was that this book is a believable tale that is captivating, filled with adventure, and a real page-turner. I truly was pulled into this story and the way the characters are written gave such life to the story that I got choked up on more than one occasion. In the kingdom of Denall, in the Western Realm, the village of Dungan is where this story begins. Kaz Kinsley and his friends Farin, Garin, and Bendar are preparing themselves for their Troven. The Troven is a tradition completed by all males that reach the age of eighteen. They leave their home and are exiled from their village for a period of four seasons. The Troven is done in memory of the founder of the village, Dungan, who left everything behind and set off with his new bride to seek out a place of his own. The tradition is symbolic of his journey into manhood. When I say exiled I mean it. The boys leave with nothing but parting gifts and have to make their way in the world, and not all boys return. In this world there are people that have exceptional skills either of listening, strength, knowledge, intellect, tracking, and sight. Ancient sorcerers had gifted these abilities to mortals. In addition there are six magical stones called the Stones of Power that are connected with one of the special abilities. Over two hundred years ago six magicians to whom the stones had been entrusted were sent out to distribute these stones to the mortals that the stones seemed to choose. These mortals became known as Stone Holders. The stones have been in hiding since then and the magicians had disappeared.
